

Poison control

Feeding your dog table food like grapes, garlic, macadamia nuts, etc., can cause serious problems and long-term issues such as kidney failure, gastrointestinal problems, and more.

The joy of aging

Older dogs can become easily confused, forgetful, and skittish. This isn't always related to normal aging and may require treatment to maintain healthy brain function.

More than usual

Dogs can get diabetes too! The most common signs of diabetes in dogs are excessive thirst, excessive hunger, and excessive urination.

A bite out of Lyme

90% of Lyme-positive animals will show no clinical signs of the disease.

Sharing is not always caring

Parasites like hookworms and roundworms can transmit zoonotic diseases. A zoonotic disease can affect multiple species like dogs and humans.

A lifetime of good health

Puppies, young, and older dogs all need regular vaccinations to stay strong and healthy. Routine visits to your veterinarian will help your dog get the right vaccinations for their lifestyle.

The heart of the matter

More than 60% of older dogs may develop heart disease.

Care for a mint?

Breath that smells sweet or fruity, ammonia-like, or abnormally pungent can indicate more serious health issues such as kidney disease, liver disease, diabetes, and more.
